Introduction

Agricultural is the main sector of Indian economy. From the independence of India to 75 years of independence of India the waitage of agricultural sectors is same. Many time Indian agricultural sector spare the Indian economy. Indian Agricultural sector is the main source of rural economy. Now a day the agricultural sectors share of rural economy is more than 50 percent and percentage of employment is more than 58 percent and maximum female workers are engaged in agricultural sectors.

Employment is the important factors for run the good economy of every country. Those countries have easy availability of employment that countries are happy and there's GDP rate is higher also. There are maximum availability of basic and infrastructure facilities and services. So employment is the essential for every person for fulfillment of his basic and social needs.

In the period of Covid-19, very sector fallen. In the period of Covid-19, Indian industrial sector and service sector was totally closed. But agricultural seasonal cultivation activities are going on. Therefore many agricultural workers were engage in the the field of agricultural and allied activities. In these activities some ware essential services so it ware helpful for generating employability in the period of Covid-19.

In India, during the past decade, Indian economy declined from agricultural to industrial and service sectors. But we cannot neglect the importance of agricultural sectors. Maximum seasonal employment available in agricultural, maximum illiterate people's employment depends on agricultural, agro business and small scale industries are depends on agricultural and 77 per cent of rural households depends on agricultural sector to sustain their live hoods. So considering this view the present topic chooses for the study.
